President's Inkwell!

Happy Spring and a Happy New Year to everyone! I sincerely hope that each and all of you had a wonderful Christmas (or alternative if celebrated) and joyfully, but safely, rang in the New Year! For my wife and me our present came a little later as we just welcomed the newest member to the Federal Surplus program, our son born March 1st. Now that we are past one of the worst days of the year, daylight savings day, it's time to look forward to all of the amazing things that 2022 has to offer!

First and foremost for NASASP is the fact that this is the beginning of our 75th year of existence. It is amazing for me to think that 75 years ago, our predecessors were working to figure out the best ways to reutilize the property from World War II and get it into the hands of the local community organizations who needed it the most. Now 75 years later, we are continuing those efforts to improve the donation program and reutilize the most Federal property possible to benefit in disaster relief, humanitarian assistance and community growth.

John Chwat, our NASASP Director of Government Relations, is working daily on Capitol Hill to move forth legislation to do just that, improve the donation program. BUT WE NEED YOU! We need champions, in the form of donees who will reach out to their Government leaders and express what the donation program has done for them. We need numbers, showing the amount of savings our programs benefit those Government leaders' constituents. We need updated lists of eligible donees to present to Government leaders illustrating the magnitude of how many organizations this program benefits. Just looking through past newsletters it's hard for me to wrap my head around the immensity of how many organizations this program has benefited in 75 years and how many more we stand ready to benefit.

If anyone has any questions, concerns or suggestions (or champions, numbers or lists) please reach out to any of the NASASP Officers.

Thank you,

Sam Sibert, Idaho SASP

NASASP President

Donee Success Story

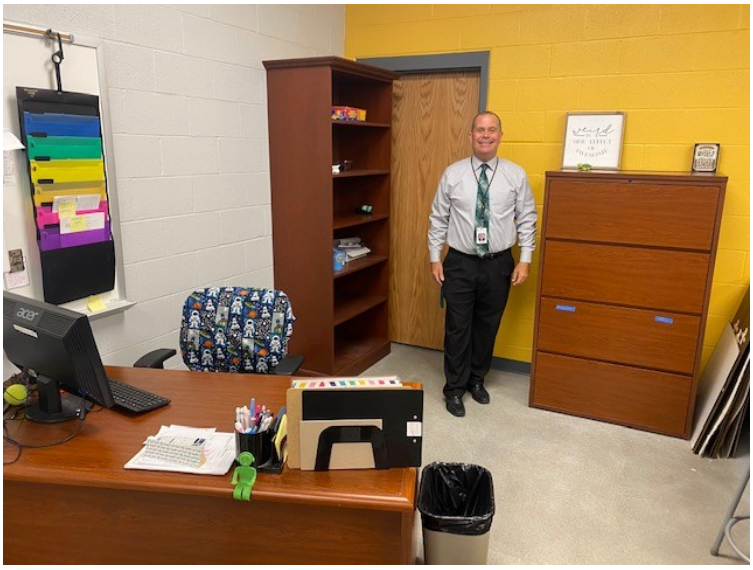
Blair Oaks School District (Missouri)

Blair Oaks RII Superintendent Dr. James Jones has been a long-time supporter of the Missouri State Agency for Surplus Property (MOSASP), saving thousands of dollars over the years as he furnishes local schools with surplus property. In 2009, he heavily utilized the program to furnish a middle school, estimating that he saved nearly $200,000 by acquiring items through MOSASP. So when Blair Oaks began building a new high school, Dr. Jones knew exactly where to go to furnish it at a fraction of the cost of buying retail.

In the spring of 2021, a federal building in St. Louis needed to be cleared of excess desks, office supplies and shelves, and much of this property ultimately made its way to the new Blair Oaks High School in Wardsville. For two weeks, MOSASP team members Paul Hodge and Ernie Rademann would leave Jefferson City at 4 a.m. to make the 280-mile round trip drive to St. Louis to pick up property. Dr. Jones secured most of what they brought back, storing it in a secondary facility while the high school was under construction. Eventually, each classroom was furnished with desks (both wooden and variable-height), shelves, tables, electronic equipment, and whiteboards. Being able to acquire so much property from a singular location helped the school maintain a cohesive look, while also helping the district save money and be good stewards of the available funds. Dr. Jones estimated the district saved more than $70,000 furnishing the high school due to acquiring property through MOSASP.

"We strive to be efficient and the best we can be. Surplus Property is a hidden gem, a piece of gold we have found. We are in the business of being good stewards of our tax dollars and MOSASP allows us to make those dollars go a long way," Dr. Jones said. Dr. Jones added that he is in constant contact with his school principals to be aware of any needs that could be supplied by MOSASP. Because he believes the program is vital to the survival of many entities, particularly school districts, he frequently encourages other school districts to utilize MOSASP to help stretch their own budget dollars.

The Missouri State Agency for Surplus Property Manager Lee Ann Blythe, said she was thrilled that MOSASP was able to meet the needs of Blair Oaks. "We work to meet the needs and wants of our donees. It pleases us that the furniture found a home and will continue to serve the Blair Oaks RII School District for years to come," Blythe stated.



Rademann said he was happy he could help the school district and looks forward to fulfilling the districts future needs. He was happy to work with Dr. Jones and appreciative of the help he provided when communicating about needed property or assisting in the unloading of furniture.

"Dr. Jones was enjoyable to work with. We communicated often about property needs and what he was looking for. He also was available to help unload the property," Rademann said.

The MOSASP team looks forward to continued collaborations with Dr. Jones and the Blair Oaks School District, as well as other school districts. This success story is a great example of the MOSASP motto of "Spend a little. Save a lot!"

Paulus Obey, Inc. (Michigan)

The Federal Surplus program has been proven to be a successful venture for Service Disabled Veteran Owned Small Business Paulus Obey, Inc. Since approval of his application, in June of 2021, owner Mr. Obey has received several items from Federal Surplus including greenhouse supplies, military tents, a manufactured home and a riding lawnmower.

He has become one of MISASPs most frequent flyers and it has been a pleasure to assist him with meeting his business goals. His continued support is greatly appreciated.

Danevang Volunteer Fire Department (Texas)

Danevang Volunteer Fire Department received a 100 kW generator set (pictured) from TX SASP's Federal Surplus Property Program in April 2019. This generator provided power to the fire station during the February 2021 freeze, for almost eight days! Fire Chief Richard Chomout, Jr. said, "We had about 100 people that relied on the Danevang VFD for a place to sleep, food, water, and keeping warm." The service charge paid for this item was $2,500 with an original acquisition cost of $72,039. That is a savings of $69,539 compared to buying brand new!

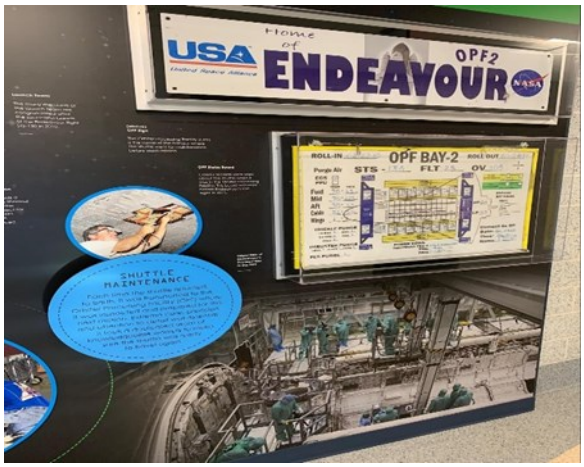
Endeavor School and Museum (New Jersey)



In a project that was years in the making, the New Jersey State Agency for Surplus Property and the GSA Personal Property Management program helped students to reach for the stars at the Endeavor School and Museum located on the Joint Base McGuire-Dix-Lakehurst military installation in central New Jersey. The school, a Department of Defense Public School on Military Installations (PMSI), opened in 2019 and is named after the space shuttle, Endeavor. The school and museum are co-located and connected.

It was donated over $51,000 of space-age artifacts that originated from items transferred through GSA's NASA Space Programs Historic Artifacts platform in 2014 that more recently enabled the Endeavor Museum to showcase the shuttle program. The artifacts included pictures, banners, status boards, payload bay flood lights, escape basket netting, and even a shuttle drag chute that now doubles as a projection screen for a looped video to display shuttle take offs and landings—all in support of themes such as exploration, innovation, teamwork, perseverance and more. The school motto is "The sky is not the limit," and is emblematic of the search for discovery embodied in all of us since the time we first looked up into the night sky and wondered . . . What lies beyond?

Surplus Property Brings Recognition to Asset Mgmt. Professionals (GA)

As the financial impact of the Covid-19 pandemic still lingers across business industries, DOAS Surplus Property continues to support the economic trajectory of State agencies and Georgia-based organizations through its dedicated work and leadership in asset management. This March, Georgia Governor Brian P. Kemp issued DOAS Surplus Property Division its first proclamation for Asset Management Awareness Month, reaffirming the value property and asset management professionals provide in helping the state save resources and reduce costs to taxpayers.

“When you consider the value of the assets in our offices and facilities, it is billions of dollars,” says Steve Ekin, Director of the DOAS Surplus Property Division. “The goal of having Asset Management Awareness Month, is not just for State employees, but also for the public to be informed about how well the state takes care of the property that has been entrusted to us. If you thought about it as a pile of money, that’s what asset management really is. It is accounting for the resources of the state, whether that be property, people or funds, they’re all assets that have to be managed,” states Ekin.

To celebrate Asset Management Awareness Month, Surplus Property launched a marketing campaign to highlight the work of asset managers and the advantages asset management brings to the community.

“Many people generally don’t consider asset management the way asset managers do. We have teams of people who take care of our human and financial assets. We have certified engineers, plumbers, electricians, and facilities maintenance employees to manage our facilities. But who’s watching all the items that are in those buildings? That’s what your asset managers are there to talk about, and the work they carry out makes a tremendous difference in cost-savings for the state, which benefits all Georgia residents,” says Ekin.

Providing guidance and leadership to State agencies in its role, Surplus Property stays abreast of policies and regulations to provide agencies up-to-date industry best practices. Ekin and several staff members have been trained and certified through the National Property Management Association. Additionally, Surplus Property maintains membership in the National Association of State Agencies for Surplus Property and actively participates in its programs.

Ekin is hopeful the proclamation recognition will help lead to a statewide as sset management standard in the future. Currently, agencies set individual standards based on needs. “Standardization and certification would help asset managers do their jobs more effectively,” says Ekin. National and internationally recognized asset management standards are established through organizations such as the International Standard Organization (ISO) and the ASTM International. “If we utilized these voluntary consensus standards, it would set the framework for audits and systems that would then mean we are all accounting for our assets the same way. The standard would be a great resource for asset managers” adds Ekin.

Georgia Celebrates Asset Management Month with Proclamation

The Surplus Property Division facilitates the disposal and redistribution for the billions in personal property assets the State of Georgia oversees. Ekin attributes DOAS collaboration in helping to fulfill the responsibilities of asset management for the state. For instance, the DOAS State Purchasing Division acquires assets under the statement of work and contracts the correct items to the right places, at the right time; while Risk Management Services through utilization, insurance, and compliance, ensures property is utilized and maintained properly. Additionally, Fleet Management also plays an important role managing over 24,000 state vehicles. Human Resource Administration establishes a framework of statewide polices that allows agencies to effectively and efficiently manage their workforce. Surplus Property ensures assets are disposed of in an appropriate and transparent manner.

"From acquisition to utilization and disposal, all of the functions of DOAS are a part of the asset management lifecycle," states Ekin.

Still, in the world of asset management, Surplus Property identifies the most valuable asset as ability to avoid costs through reuse, reducing and recycling – the pinnacle of its mission.

Through the U.S. General Services Administration, DOAS Surplus Property Division is the State Agency for Surplus Property (SASP) and administers the Surplus Property Donation Program for federal and State of Georgia surplus property.

N.J. Kitchens: Guardian of the Public Purse

The 1979 NASASP rally against a surcharge on DoD donations

History may not repeat itself, but at times, it certainly rhymes. For instance, the nation witnesses a spike in energy prices, Moscow invades a neighboring country, and the Federal Government seeks to expand reimbursement opportunities for surplus property donations. Does this scenario sound familiar? The year was 1979, and had it not been for the NASASP President at that time, N.J. Kitchens, participation in the donation program may have been hindered for SASPs across the country.

After the Senate and House Appropriations Committee Report on the 1979 Department of Defense Appropriations Bill called for a study on the feasibility of a 5.3% surcharge on the transfers of surplus property, NASASP was given the opportunity to testify before Congress regarding the impact that would make on participating agencies across the country. N.J. Kitchens, who was at that time the Director of the Alabama SASP and the NASASP President, argued against the implementation of a surcharge that was intended to offset the DoD's requested appropriation for the operation of the disposal program. He gathered statements from other SASPs and collected letters from donee organizations nationwide. A portion of his May 22, 1979 testimony to the U.S. House of Representatives Subcommittee of the Department of Defense of the Committee on Appropriations is to the right.

The Comptroller General agreed with NASASP in their report to Congress on the impact of public law 94-519 that the imposition of surcharge would result in reduced donee participation in the program. According to the US General Accounting Office's review of PL 94-519, a 2% surcharge on DoD property was imposed on 7/7/1980, but the surcharge provision was quickly reduced and then removed shortly after.

NASASP, under the leadership of N.J. Kitchens, fulfilled their promise to "leave no stones unturned to defeat the proposed surcharge." They organized together and, with the help of numerous donee organizations, made a compelling argument for why donating property to SASPs at no charge meets the greatest public good.

STATEMENT OF MR. KITCHENS

Mr. KITCHENS. My name is N. J. Kitchens, President of the National Association of State Agencies for Surplus Property and Director of the Alabama State Agency for Federal Property.

On my left is the Vice President of the National Association, Mr. Jerry Clemenson from Virginia. On my immediate right, the Chairman of the Legislative Committee, Mr. Don Marrero from Louisiana, and at his right is Albert Chapman, Mr. Marrero's Assistant from Louisiana.

Mr. EDWARDS. May I just say, Mr. Kitchens is well known in Alabama as one of the guardians of the public purse, and one of the great people in the business of handling surplus property, and he is highly respected.

He does not come from my district and cannot vote for me.

Mr. KITCHENS. Thank you, Congressman.

Mr. Chairman, members of the subcommittee, it is a privilege to appear before you in support of the donation program and voice my deep concern and opposition to a proposed surcharge to be levied against all military excess and surplus property being disposed of by the Defense Logistics Agency.

The Congress recognized many years ago that if federal surplus property were sold, the average dollar return would not match the public benefits derived from the donation of the property to special local uses of a public character.

In our opinion, a surcharge on items transferred for donation to states, local governments and tax-exempt nonprofit institutions would not only be contrary to Public Law 94-519 but would counteract the expressed congressional intentions back to the 66th Congress.

In summary, we endorse a statement relative to the subject made by the late Senator John McClellan when he was Chairman of the Senate Government Operations Committee:

"In other words, we believe that the overall general welfare would be better served by giving this property that is available to these institutions rather than having it sold and realize even 60 or 70 percent on the dollar of its costs."

We have a very large stack of correspondence nationwide—I won't bother to read it—from every school district in almost every state in the nation, explaining the devastating effect any surcharge will have on the donation program.

It will deprive them of property they cannot get; they cannot pay a service charge; and we honestly and sincerely hope that you gentlemen will give this consideration before allowing a surcharge to be placed on any federal excess or surplus property.

Thank you, sir.

Mr. ADDABBO. Thank you very much. We appreciate your statement and the history of the law which brings it into better view.

Mr. Edwards?

Mr. EDWARDS. Thank you, Mr. Chairman.

Well, that is a good statement, Mr. Kitchens.

NASASP Overseas Facilitator Report

In December 2020, the NASASP Overseas Program shipped this model year 2000, International 4900, Rescue Truck with 21,300 miles on it from DLA Gimcheon, Korea to Charlestown, Rhode Island. Fire Chief Kettle had this unit completely refurbished. This truck was a huge savings to the town of Charleston and great use of Overseas U.S. Government Property. Before and after pictures show what an amazing piece of property this is!

NASASP Government Relations Report

March is a very busy time in Washington, DC, with Congress passing a $1.5T federal budget, allocating funds for the agencies impacting NASASP and SASP operations, including the GSA, SBA and DLA, among others. Since the start of this Session of Congress two months ago, the 2,714-page funding bill has joined the NDAA (National Defense Authorization bill for FY22), the Infrastructure and Investment Jobs Act, and several more bills all over 2,500 pages not to mention thousands of pages of policy directives to the agencies. This is on top of many proposed regulations submitted by the government every day in the Federal Register for review. It is a period of intense legislation and policy since the year 2022 will also host the White House submission of another Federal budget for FY2023 to the Congress which begins a seven-month cycle of bills, amendments, and funding directives. All of this is on top of Members of Congress either retiring at the end of this year (with all their staff looking for jobs) or positioning for the November 8, 2022, elections which some have indicated may bring a whole new set of leadership and policy this Fall. Quite a lot of events and actions to monitor, but NASASP is very much alerted to these matters as they relate to the Federal Surplus Property Program.

In mid-March the officers of NASASP sent all SASPs the GSA proposed Rules changes to the Exchange/Sale process embodied in FMR 102.39. NASASP is seeking input and preparing a consolidated response to these changes. If you haven't already, please respond to the email with your input by COB on Friday April 1. As an integral part of NASASPs "watching, responding, protecting," activities relating to the 75-year-old Federal surplus property program, it is critical to be able to identify these federal agency policy changes and to address concerns where appropriate and on a timely basis.

The Government Relations activities of NASASP also included this past month a second expansive point of contact listing, state by state and territories, for SASPs to consider in reaching out to SBA programs, such as the Veteran Small Business Owners. This listing, together with suggested Veterans Service Organizations, Chambers of Commerce, business contacts and other veterans outreach suggestions are part of a greater national effort underway to educate Veteran groups and Veteran small business owners about the FSPP, our state donation process and other implementation opportunities to work with SASPs. We are also interested in how the program can be made "better," and to galvanize the over 2.5M veterans who own small businesses around the country (a 2012 statistic which must be larger now) to seek federal surplus property. SASPs are urged to identify for our outreach efforts, key SBA 8(a) company owners to support the FSPP. We welcome suggestions on who to contact within your state; and success stories of 8(a) companies who secured FSPP and went on to be successful, creating jobs, providing revenue to local and state government, and increasing profitability (a good example of our motto "Pro Bono Publico," FOR THE PUBLIC GOOD). NASASP is spreading this message to the U.S. Congress and to the leadership in Congress on how this 75-year-old program has benefited hundreds of thousands of American citizens, small businesses, and their communities.

The government relations activities of NASASP are also very focused on the upcoming Annual meeting this July in Washington, DC. The occasion enhanced an ongoing outreach to the entire U.S. Senate and U.S. House Members and their professional staff on the value of the FSPP and the impact of state donations. It includes NASASP recommendations to change several provisions in Title 40 relating to the donation program authority and to provide SASP donation priority before exchange/sale designation. We are making the case that non-profit donees, many servicing the disabled, elderly, homeless, and impoverished, as well as many other donees whether 8(a) or Veteran owned small business, need more, not less, federal surplus property.

NASASP has priorities in the U.S. Congress relating to the Committees in the U.S. House and Senate that have jurisdiction over GSA, SBA and DLA, as well as all funding committees and others that would impact federal surplus property issues.

Please let us know if you can reach out to the U.S. Congressional Members or U.S. Senators from your State and we can target the appropriate staffs and method of communication that can supplement details on state donation and state related donee benefits. We can respond to inquiries on who are your Members of Congress and how best to support NASASP, provided as a SASP you are able to undertake this communication. This grassroots-constituent contact can also be assisted by us for donees interested in helping NASASP. I am available anytime to assist in this request.

As the Spring 2022 unfolds, there will be additional pressures on the Congress and government not included in these multi-thousand-page bills - issues of the daily headlines such as Ukraine. NASASP is watching carefully all funding and policy actions which can include small provisions in larger bills and directives touching every aspect of your program. Changes are inevitable. Knowing how to meet these challenges is a key to success.
